BASSANO JUNIORS STILL UNBEATEN

The 5-2 With Bow City to Maintain
Unbeaten Record, Sixth Game
Won and Two Tied This Season.

Battling through a snowfall that nearly stopped the game in the second period, the Bassano Juniors held Bow City seniors to a 2-2 tie last Friday, February 5, at Bow City. The Bassano boys hold Bow City 2-1 in the first game played here a week previous. It was Bassano's second game of the season, and in losing Bow City the Bassano boys maintained their undefeated record with eight victories to their credit.

The Bassano team made a weak start in the first period and just could not hit their stride. Without the service of Al Ceder, badly de-fence man, who arrived late, they were at a further disadvantage. Bow City scored twice in this period, Sparow and Vince Nelson both scored.

Bassano started strong in the second period, and with their team play working good, they could not play into enemy territory late after time. Ford, playing a brilliant game, netted the first center for Bassano and was in the final minutes to tie the game. Although they had a big advantage in territorial play, Bassano was unable to come through with a winning goal.

Show fell during the entire game, and in the second period there was as much snow on the ice that the rubber disc was lost several times. No overtime was played.

The Teams
Bassano: Johnson, Ceder, Donaldson; Ford, Leonard, Arneson; Flisk, Night, MacLean, Warren.
Bow City: Lane, Sparow, T. Nelson, Hootley, Wendt, V. Nelson; Lane, Lane.

Virgil Nelson of Brooks, referee.

Hopitable Hosts
The people of Bow City were most hospitable hosts to the Bassano team. After the game the hockey boys enjoyed the use of the shower baths at the coal mine and set down in a fine lunch in the dressing room at the rink.

The hockey players and a number of Bassano fans who went to Bow City for the game, then attended the dance in the hall.

The snow still continued all night, and the Bassano players and fans remained in the hall until daylight before returning home.

The club also bought a quantity of yarn and knitted pairs of mitts which were given to needy families.

The Women's Institute wishes to thank all those who have contributed to the good cause. Further contributions of clothing, food or money will be thankfully received.

Only two more days!
Less than forty-eight hours!

Saturday night, February 12, is the close of the big "First Period" in the Mail circulation campaign. After Saturday night all subscriptions are worth less credits toward helping your favorite win that wonderful Ford sedan. Every period reading this is a friend of one of the workers in this race. Look at the label on your paper right now and see if it is paid in full. Put the name of the workers, pick out the one you want to see win and volunteer your subscription. If you are in arrears many years and can't pay it all, pay what you can now and the balance later. But remember that it will cost much more later if you can get it to them before Saturday night. If you can't get in touch with your favorite, bring out and get here to The Mail office by Saturday night and we will see that it is counted in on the big credits.

Prizes Must Help
Leading candidates are meeting with the battle of preparation for the final dash and are fighting with determination to reach the goal where the valuable awards await. How about it, Mr. Subscriber? Are you doing your part? Have you given your subscription? Are you turning your back on your friend? Are you going to make your favorite the loser? You can help them WIN by giving your subscription or you can help them LOSE with only a "promise."

Candidates are requested to come to The Mail office as early as possible. They will be waited on in order, first come first served. The Mail office will close its doors as soon as all candidates have reported in full and with its close the "First Period" of the campaign will be over. There will positively be no subscriptions accepted for the "First Period" after Saturday night—except such subscriptions as may be contained in letters post-marked February 12.

The management permits out-of-town candidates and their friends to mail subscriptions as late as the closing hour and receive the big credit even though the order does not reach The Mail office until Monday.

Candidates, Attention!
The real test is now at hand. If you ever intend doing anything big in this campaign, DO IT NOW! Instead of being one of the small prize winners, get up to the top and stay there. Now is the time to secure a lead that will be unassailable with the smaller credits. Now is the time to make reasonably sure of the prize you most desire. Never again, after Saturday night will it be possible to secure the full rating power on subscription. To hold back or to rely on "promises" only means that you will have to accept less credits.

C. P. R. LAND OWNERS GET BIG TAX CUT

1931 Interest Cancelled—Owners
Will Accept Principal Payment on One-Tenth Crop Share Basis.

The voluntary writing off of interest on land contracts for 1931 by the Canadian Pacific Railway, as outlined in Montreal dispatches Tuesday will affect 10,000 farmers in the three prairie provinces, of which nearly half are in Alberta. This statement was made by G. G. Porter, Calgary, manager of the natural resources department of the company.

Mr. Porter stated that the company had chosen not to dilute the money involved in the action.

Officials of the department met Tuesday in Ottawa to discuss the contract holders to get over the signature of A. Newman, general land superintendent.

The letter outlined the company's intentions in effecting relief to the farmers by a voluntary and unconditional writing-off of one year's interest on the unpaid balance of land contracts exclusive of taxes paid by the company.

The measure further provides a writing off of a second year's interest on condition that during 1932 at least one year's taxes are paid in full and payment of the equivalent of one instalment of principal and interest on the unpaid balance of the contract.

The company offers further to give credit of one additional dollar for each dollar paid in reduction of arrears of interest.

A one-third share of crop, in lieu of the balance of the unpaid principal and interest instalment, will be acceptable to the company.

The company will be glad to meet crop area meet the approval of the company.

KATHARINE NEWIN BURT

Fifth Instalment

Fresh from a French convent, Jocelyn Harlowe returned to New York to her socially select mother, a religious ambitious woman. The girl was hurried into an engagement with the wealthy Felix Kent. Her father, Nick Sandal, surreptitiously enters the girl's home one night. He tells her he used to call her Linda Sandal. The girl is torn by her desire to see life in the raw and to become part of her mother's society. Her father studies her surroundings.

Linda visits her father in his study quarters. She finds four men playing cards when she arrives. One of them, Jack Ayeward, her father tells her, is like a son to him. But warns the girl he is a trifter. Linda pays a second visit to her father and Jack takes her home, on the way stopping with her at an underworld cabaret.

Jack gets into a fight with a gangster who insists on dancing with Linda. He then takes Linda home.

Now go on with the story.

At the corner of her own home street she told him to leave her and wait a quarter of eight.

"I'm sorry I was so rude and so ungrateful, Mr. Ayeward. It was not really your fault."

"Yes, it was," he answered grimly. "I won't offend again. Good-by."

In her own small bedroom, safe and the knot beside her bed, and trembling all over and in tears, she thanked her God for the first time since she was born for the great, the dangerous, the admirable gift of living.

In spite of her dangerous experience she went back to her father's rooms a few nights later. Ayeward overtook her climbing up the stairs. "Playing in hard luck again, aren't you, Miss Sandal? I've got to go on up. Have some important news for your father. But don't worry--I won't stay long."

She knocked at Sandal's door.

There was no response. Jack murmured an apology, fitted a key and opened the door.

"Hi there, Old Nick!" he shouted. Then to Linda in his usual low rather subdued voice. "He's gone out."

"That's too bad. It is almost my last day," she allowed herself to tell him.

"Leaving town?" He was at the desk running over some papers.

"Yes. And it will never again be easy. I'm afraid to see my father."

"That's right. He'll take losing you very hard."

Her face glowed withally. Her eyes, lit at the black-lashed corners, filled.

"Do you think he will care? Does he like me? Really? Enough to matter?"

Jack had begun to prowl about the room like some restless animal.

"I'm getting jealous of you, that's all. He's more my father than he is yours when it comes to practice. He talks about you so that I'm sure of the sound of your name. Linda--Linda--Linda--Linda."

He said this savagely in various tones of bitterness. Linda was forced to laugh at him.

"You're a funny boy!"

"Since when?"

"I mean you are not very old are you?"

"I'm nearer thirty than twenty. And you are," he was teasing her, "fifteen!"

"Gracious! Righteous."

Linda rose.

"When do you suppose Nick will be back?" she asked.

"His message on the desk says eleven o'clock. What time is it now?"

"Nine-thirty."

"Come to a show with me. I swear I won't take you among the criminal class-ones." He broadened this absurdly.

Linda flushed.

"I do not understand how you dared in the first place to take me to such a place as that one."

She looked down at her own boy's fingers, frowning.

"Yes. I should really be grateful to you. If I could only trust you I should very much like for you to show me life."

He chuckled, then spoke seriously. "Why can't you trust me? Don't you Nick's daughter?"

"I want to know what life looks like. Mr. Ayeward, when one turns round blindly to face it, one wants to know people, all kinds of people, different sorts of people. I want to know how good it is to be bad and how bad it is to be good. I want adventure, risks, dangers--"

"Put on no account do you want to brush against the shoulder of a released bootlegger in a sebakoo?"

Linda said up, opening her eyes. "I will go back with you to that place tonight," she said, reaching for her fan.

"No. It's too early. And you would miss Nick. But I like your grit. I saw you had the makings, but I got you wrong at first, I admit. You've still got me guessing in lots of ways. You belong for all your Apache get-up, you belong to a world I've come close to forgetting. "Although," his face looked bewildered--"although it hasn't been so long."

"You are a gentleman. I saw that at once."

"What is a gentleman?" he demanded bitterly.

"I have known very few. Felix Kent of course."

Jack sprang away from her with movement so abrupt and startling that Linda made an exclamation of alarm.

Linda wondered at the change that had come over him. He did not seem like the same man at all. Perhaps more like the man he had looked on the stairs, hard and hungry. During their little talk this hardness had melted from him.

"I'd rather you stay with me and go when Nick gets back. Surely you have no business on hand at this hour." And she added with a quaint air of interest, "Is the business been good lately?"

"I am a professional gambler, Miss Sandal," Ayeward announced abruptly. "Does that put me into your criminal class?"

Linda flattered and drew her eyebrows together and studied.

"I don't know," she admitted. "It is crime to gamble?"

"Let Nick advise you as to the social and moral status of a gambler."

"No. He's not got the hands for it." Jack was in the doorway and suddenly turned his back and went out.

Then as it was growing late she decided she had better not wait for Nick any longer. She went home shivering to herself.

A few days later Jocelyn wrote a note to Nick Sandal in which she told him she would be all alone on Thursday night and that she wanted him to come early and spend the evening with her. There were a few lines, she wrote him that he must explain to her.

Mary had been sent out early that Thursday night, so when the clock toll rang Jocelyn started forward to answer it herself.

She started unexpectantly at the noise who stood there in the handsome empty little vestibule of the apartment building. During that moment, seeing him in outline for the strong light was back of him, she thought this figure of a stranger noble, patient and proud.

She recognized Jack Ayeward. Vexation, anxiety, alarm in swift succession sent all her pulses jumping.

"My father is ill? He sent you?"

"He is ill--not seriously--but too ill to come. An attack of pain and fever; the exertion of moving perhaps. We're in a very respectable quarter at present."

She saw that his eyes had swiftly taken in all the detail of the apartment--the entrance to the bedroom, the glass doors of leather opening to the small alcove which held Marcelle's shrine.

He looked again at her. "May I stay just for a little while? It's been an hour since I was in this sort of place talking in this sort of girl."

She played for him fascinated by his face which she watched stealthily. As he turned at the end of her playing, his shoulder struck against a framed picture and he knocked it down to the floor. He hastened to pick it up and stood still, with a changed face, staring at the photograph of Felix Kent.

If the young man had met Medea he could not have more terribly suffered an alteration. Youth and the peace of his listening were whittled into like lightning.

He controlled the convulsion, set down the picture and moved down the full length of the room to stand at the window, his back turned.

"How terribly you hate that man," said Jocelyn. She spoke as easily, as lightly as she could. "I wish you'd tell me why."

"Kent came from my mother's family. My father was a clergyman then. Kent was ten years older than I. When I got out of the school of mine, mining engineer was my original profession--he got me my first job."

"Kent had me sent down to inspect a mine mine. I went over the mine with its owner, a man named Talley. Came back to displease with my report. First-rate mine--sure-fire investment. Everything the owner had showed me was O. K. I was optimistic and cocksure. Had no reason that I knew of not to be. I had made a straight report on a good mine. I believe, Miss Sandal, that any other engineer would have handed in just such a report as that was. Kent was forming a corporation to take over this mine. Capitalized it at two million dollars."

He proposed to sell this mine to a town-people--my town-people--at par, that is, two million dollars for the entire mine. I knew that Algeon Talley was willing to sell the mine to Kent for one million dollars. My report--you see my name, my father's name was good--was printed and circulated. I was elected secretary of the corporation and consulting engineer. They gave me a small block of stock. I fancied myself suddenly rather a big man."

"It is necessary before a stockholder can have any say in the affairs of such a corporation to make an affidavit to the Secretary of the Commonwealth based on his personal knowledge and setting forth the exact value of the asset upon which the stock is issued. Kent got me to make this affidavit."

"Now, just closely. The making of such an affidavit, false or headstrong, subjects the maker to fine and to imprisonment."

There was a gray shadow on this young man, Linda drew back a little in her chair. Something had been mysterious in his aspect was explained to her.

"That mine turned out to be no good. Miss Harlowe. The stockholders--my town-people, my father's friends, my friends--lost their investment. I was prosecuted. Found guilty and sentenced to three years in state's prison."

Linda spoke with a certain difficulty. "I understand that you would naturally be tempted to find some explanation for your own terrible misfortune. But since I know Mr. Kent very well, I find the whole story--as you tell it--perfectly preposterous."

Jack was looking at her carefully and coolly. He bowed.

"I didn't suppose you would believe me. I merely wanted to explain to you my hatred of Felix Kent. I hoped that it might damage him with you."

As he seemed to leave he handed her a slip of paper.

"Here is Nick's new address. He doesn't like you coming to that other place, you'll come to see him."

"Yes."

ARTERIO-SCLEROSIS
With the approach of old age, changes in the arteries are to be expected. In some cases these changes take over a period of years. The change which we know as arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, means that the walls of the arteries have become thick and inelastic.

When this change occurs in middle life, we have what may be called premature old age, for it has been said with truth that a man is as old as his arteries. The change in the arteries is generally associated with changes in other parts which may be either the cause or the result of the altered condition of the arteries.

Hardening of the arteries follows poisoning of the body. Alcohol and lead are systemic poisons. Another form of poisoning is by the toxins given off by germs which are present in the body. The toxins may come from a focus of infection, such as diseased teeth, or they may be the toxins given off by the germs of syphilis or some acute infection.

Overwork of some part of the body leads to an early wearing out of the body machine, and this may mean early hardening of the arteries. Perhaps the most usual way in which the body is made to overwork is through overeating. Another cause is living at high pressure under mental strain.

It is evident that if we wish our arteries young, which means elastic it is necessary for us to live a life of moderation. Discretion in eating and drinking, attention to the simple rules of healthy living, have their reward in more years of health, more years in which to enjoy life, to work and to play. This is better than trying to crowd a whole lifetime into a few years, then to spend the remainder of life handicapped by a prematurely worn-out body.

Those individuals in whom the condition has developed must face the situation; they must adjust their lives to meet new conditions. If they do so, they can enjoy a life of restricted activity.

Life for such individuals must be quiet, well-regulated and without indulgence in excess in food or drink. Excesses of any kind, whether physical exertion, mental worry, anger or excitement, must be avoided.

The prevention of hardening of the arteries lies in a hygienic life, the avoidance of excesses, reasonable attention to diet, and the early treatment of any infectious condition. Abuse of the body results in harm. The body cannot suffer a bone to-day and have it made up by extra care to-morrow. Abuse leaves permanent scars which lead to an early wearing out or premature old age.

Who Are You Boosting

Do you know Miss Henrietta Deegan, better known as "Toots", who lives eight miles southwest of here, in the Blackfoot Indian Reserve and is after that Ford sedan to be given away on March 27?

Then there is Miss Elsie Doda, who works in the office of the District Court and who has friends all over the entire section that would like to see her the winner of one of the higher awards.

Also, we have Mrs. E. Gahan of Duchess, who is representing that territory in this race and is a hard worker at anything she undertakes. She will do her best to bring that wonderful prize to Duchess.

High Gayford, in a well-known young man around Bassano who is unemployed at present and is using his spare time on the "Weekly Payroll" with the opportunity of winning a Ford sedan for his efforts.

And there is H. G. Hiebert, the popular Hawleigh man, who has scores of friends over this territory who are boosting him to win and are helping him with subscriptions.

At Rosemary we have a very well liked young lady, Mrs. J. Norton, who is a hustler and is out after subscriptions early and late. She means business and is counting on winning that fine automobile.

Another worker from Bassano is Miss Phyllis Plimmer, living a couple of miles south of town and very popular in her school work and music. Keep an eye on Phyllis, she wants that first prize.

Possibly one of the best known candidates is R. A. Travis of Hester, who has sold insurance in this district for many years and has made friends far and wide. Watch out for Mr. Travis.

Gem community has an energetic young representative in the person of Miss Helen Waltemath, who has been doing good work ever since she entered the campaign and says she is going to make the others sit up and take notice.

Are YOU helping one of these workers by subscribing to your home paper? You can do it at no extra cost to yourself and some one of them is going to win a Ford Tudor sedan on March 2. Get behind your favorite and give them a boost.

TOKIO REPORTS CHINESE

REFUSAL TO RETIRE

TOKIO, Feb. 11.—Hope for a peaceful ending of the Szechuan situation faded today in government quarters because of the Chinese refusal to withdraw from the foreign area in the beleaguered city.

Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, was informed that Japan feared the situation could not be solved peacefully.

A government spokesman commenting at the same time on the Geneva report that the Soviet government was re-organizing its border garrisons, said this means the Japanese army cannot withdraw from Harbin.

The government appeared greatly relieved at a decided lessening of the tension apparent in foreign quarters over the Japanese attitude in China. The powers were understood here to have accepted Japan's explanations that "nothing permanent" was intended in its military operations in the Yangtze valley.

THE PICTURES

Ronald Colman fans will turn out en masse to see him in his latest performance, "The Devil to Pay," at the Queen Theatre Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week. Feb. 11, 12, and 13.

The story was especially written for Colman by Frederick Lonsdale. Amusing and surprising situations, continuous fun, and roars of laughter, punctuate the progress of the novel plot which provides in leading players with one of his most engaging roles.

Ronald Colman plays the Hon. William, a wealthy son of the British Lord Lealand, who has sent the young man to South Africa to make a man of himself. Bankrupt, he auctions off his belongings, and arrives home "broke." He humors his irate father into an agreeable mood, and finds himself one hundred pounds to the good. Colman meets and falls in love with a young society beauty. The girl's ambitious father has contrived to get her engaged to a Grand Duke. The girl risks being disowned for Colman, but only on condition that he never again see an actress with whom he has been keeping company. By a planned "accident" Colman sees her again and complications follow rapidly.

Vina Delmar's sensational story, "Bad Girl," is coming Thursday, Friday, and Saturday next week, Feb. 18, 19, and 20. The theatre managers wish to advise theatregoers that the title in a picture is just a name, but when the author herself applauds there is something more than a mere title. This extraordinary flesh and blood story of two young people is so human that it moved Miss Delmar to tears. Also a two-reel comedy, "Fowl Affair."

GLEICHEN MIDGETS DEFEAT LOCALS

Before a record crowd the Gleichen midgets clashed with the Basasso midgets at the local rink in a game that displayed plenty of action and a good brand of hockey. The visitors outclassed the locals by a wide margin in the first period but in the remaining stanzas the play was about even.

In the first period the visitors broke through the locals time and again till finally Don Jardine on a pass from Mac Bean beat Maurer for Gleichen's first counter.

In about five minutes of play Schaefer and Murray got through for the visitors. Murray drew Maurer from his post passed to Schaefer who easily pushed the disc into the net.

In the second period play continued up with the local settee trying hard for goals while the visitors endeavored to increase their 2-0 lead. There is also exhibition of combination Angell and Marquardt got through for the locals. Marquardt passing to Angell who back-handed the puck into the net for Basasso's first goal.

Shortly after the face-off Schaefer picked the puck up in centre ice, stickhandles through the locals and shoots the puck past Maurer for Gleichen's third and final goal.

Play broke in the third period with both teams trying hard. The locals sending four men up the ice in an attempt to score till finally Gregg and Stiles broke through their opponents defence, Stiles passing to Gregg, who beat the post. The past goal for Basasso's second counter.

Play was even from then till the final bell, both teams trying to score but failed to do so, the score ending 3-2 for Gleichen.

Linedup of Teams:
Gleichen—Goal, Bogle; Murray; MacBean; Don Jardine, Schaefer, Lester; Moss, Gilbert, Clifford.

Basasso—Goal, Maurer; Angell, Marquardt; Basarrah, Ford, Smith; Cawsey, Johnson, Gregg and Stiles. Penalties—1st period: Schaefer, 1 minute. 2nd period: Ford, 1 min. 3rd period: Basarrah; MacBean, 1 minute.
